This true 1 ½ story house appears to be of frame construction. The three bay by two bay building faces east. The roofline has been raised to include an addition to the rear. Another small two story addition adjoins the north end.

A concrete floored porch covers the main façade. The entrance is centered in this side. 2/2 sash windows appear on the first floor level while small windows light the half story.

The porch roof is covered with metal roofing but the main roof is covered with modern asphalt shingles. The entire building is sheathed in aluminum siding. The structure has lost its original chimney. A modern exterior brick flue is located at the north end. At the south end of the house the concrete-covered stone foundation includes an exterior cellar entrance.
